Head of Technical Services for Syngenta Canada

Tara McCaughey is Head of Technical Services for Syngenta Canada. She leads a team of agronomists and technical experts in Syngenta who are focused on understanding the needs of Canadian growers and delivering products and services that they value. She is able to distill complex science and technical information about Syngenta products and steward a narrative that is clear and evidence-based to support customers in growing the best crop.

Tara provides leadership and direction for the development and deployment of technical product positioning in support of product lifecycle management and new product introductions.

Tara brings broad experience to this role gained over the course of her career with Syngenta and legacy companies. She joined Syngenta in 1996 after completing her Masters at the University of Guelph in weed science, and has held roles in regulatory, crop protection development as well as product and customer marketing.

Syngenta Canada is an agribusiness whose ambition is to be the most collaborative and trusted team in agriculture, providing leading seeds and crop protection innovations to enhance the prosperity of farmers and ensure the continued sustainability of agriculture.
